Churchmen of widely differing forms of churchmanship united in 1975 to build this nation-wide network of people pledged:

* To uphold the worship and doctrine of the Church of England as enshrined in the Book of Common Prayer
* To encourage the use of the Book of Common Prayer as a major element in the worshipping life of the Church of England

The Prayer Book Society

* does NOT propagate Prayer Book fundamentalism but believes a modest amount of flexibility in usage is both sensible and to be desired
* does NOT seek to suppress the Alternative Services but is, however, concerned at the extent to which the Alternative Services have displaced the Prayer Book and is alarmed by the extensive pastoral problems which often result from an unfeeling implementation of liturgical change

The Prayer Book Society aims

* To encourage the use of the Book of Common Prayer for the training of Ordinands and Confirmands
* To spread knowledge of the Book of Common Prayer and the doctrine contained therein and above all to see it used

Formed over 25 years ago by a group of ileostomists and members of the medical profession, the Ileostomy Association was the first ostomy organisation in this country.

An estimated 20,000 people in the UK have had an ileostomy, but because of the psychological barriers that this can present and its 'delicate' nature, public awareness of the subject and the association is still limited.

Ileostomy surgery is a complex technique to remove the large intestine and create an artificial outlet – the ileostomy. As a result of such surgery many people have been given the opportunity to continue to lead a full and normal life. Which means that you have probably met an ileostomist at some time, without even realising it.

The Ileostomy Association is a mutual-aid group that exists primarily to assist and advise those people who have had, or are about to have the operation; to help them with all aspects of their rehabilitation, including their social activities and various relationships.

We do this in a number of ways that include members meetings, equipment exhibitions and a quarterly journal of news, views, correspondence and information.

The Ileostomy Association helps those people who need it most, but in addition, a considerable amount of time and effort is spent on research into the different aspects of living with an ileostomy, and the illnesses that can cause it.

As a registered charity supported by voluntary workers and voluntary funds there is always a limit to our resources. To be able to continue with our work we are always grateful for all forms of assistance.

If you can help, or would like further information, please contact us at the following address:

Non-alcoholic Communion Wines

We have been producers of these and other non-alcoholic beverages since 1858. It was in that year, during the early days of temperance reformation, that Mr. Frank Wright founded this company. Mr. Wright, a teetotaller, was concerned that, in spite of practising abstinence from alcohol, he and other teetotallers were called upon to partake of it during Holy Communion. Having seen in some ancient writings certain references to the preparation of unfermented wine, Mr. Wright, a chemist by profession, spent some years developing a product which was to be the fore-runner of our now world-famous Number 1 and Number 5 brands of non-alcoholic wines.

MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE

Assistance with Fees for Children of Clergy

1. Marlborough College was founded as a school 'for the sons of clergy and others'.
2. Today girls are admitted as well as boys (6th Form only).
3. From the "Children of Clergy Fund" grants-in-aid are made to children of clergymen on grounds of need. This means that, while the basic fee for children of clergy is 85% of the full fee, most are admitted on fees substantially below that amount, and where home circumstances make a boarding school especially important, it is occasionally possible for the fee to be very small.
4. In addition, there are three closed competitive ('Foundation') Scholarships (value £500 to £100) for sons of clergymen each year.
5. Sons of clergymen may also enter for Open Scholarships, of which about ten are awarded annually (value full fees to £100).

Particulars from
The Registrar, Marlborough College, Wiltshire.

CRANLEIGH SCHOOL

Entrance Scholarships restricted to sons of Clergymen of the Church of England are offered annually and include one at full fees and Whately-Simmonds Awards of substantial value. Peek Foundation Bursaries of up to £400 p.a. are open to the sons of Clergy in the Dioceses of Winchester, Salisbury, Portsmouth and Guildford and are awarded on a boy's performance in the Common Entrance examination and interview. Apart from these Closed Awards, Open Scholarships are offered; these are one at full fees, one at two-thirds fees, one at half fees. Eight other awards at up to one quarter fees are also offered. All awards are fees-linked, increasing in value at the same percentage as the fees. Full details may be obtained from the Headmaster, Cranleigh School, Surrey.

CHRIST'S HOSPITAL

A competitive examination for boys at Christ's Hospital, Horsham, and for girls at Christ's Hospital, Hertford, is held annually in JANUARY.

Children must be between 10½ and 12 years of age on 1st September following the examination, though able Candidates may apply for consideration if 10 years or over on that date, provided that they will have completed a full primary course of instruction before entry.

Parents must fulfil the Hospital's requirement of being 'in need of assistance' towards their children's education. As a rough guide, and subject to certain adjustments, it may be taken that, where the gross family income does not exceed £8,500 p.a. with one dependent child (an extra allowance of £500 p.a. is made for each additional dependent child), the candidate may be eligible to compete.

A small number of places will also be available by competition for which there is no restriction in parental income.

Contributions are required towards the cost of clothing, education and maintenance, ranging at admission from nil to £1,251 p.a., according to income. Each case is reviewed annually, and, in the event of improved financial circumstances, an increased contribution, up to as much as full cost (at present about £3,619 p.a.), may be required.

Further particulars and forms of application (available from 1st September to 10th October) may be obtained from: The Clerk of Christ's Hospital, 26 Great Tower Street, London, EC3R 5AL.

"How about a little Peace and Quiet!"

A little peace and quiet towards the end of the day is what most people want. Most clergymen would like this sort of opportunity to relax when the time comes to retire, but it is not always so easy. When a clergyman retires he has to give up his home, and home-hunting on a pension is not a relaxing activity!

The Church of England Pensions Board administers nine homes including a nursing home, which are scattered around the country. A place in any one of these nine will mean a real home offering security, friends and privacy, as in most cases the residents have their own rooms or flatlets, but also the comfort of knowing that if there is an accident the matron is near at hand.

The Church of England Pensions Board also administers over 600 flats, bungalows and houses, most of which have been given or bequeathed or bought out of funds given to the Board to help those people who have given up their lives for the benefit of others for occupation under licences, and the occupants pay a maintenance charge.

Your donation or bequest could mean a home for someone in need.

Our Country for Christ

The Society provides financial support for a biblical and pastoral ministry in the parishes of England and Wales by giving grants of over £50,000 a year.

CPAS also helps by stimulating evangelism, encouraging those considering parish ministry, as well as through camps, literature, women's work, lay training, and youth work through CYFA, Pathfinders, Explorers, and Climbers.

UNITED SOCIETY FOR THE PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL

(Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign parts, founded by Royal Charter in 1701; and the Universities' Mission to Central Africa, founded 1860, joined to form USPG in 1965. The Cambridge Mission to Delhi merged with the Society in 1968.)

President: The Archbishop of Canterbury

USPG supports the work of the Anglican Churches in 50 countries in 21 Provinces overseas and four Provinces in Britain.

More than 300 men and women, including priests, doctors, teachers and farmers, from Great Britain and Ireland, are on its list of missionaries. Financial support is given to many more people of other nationalities who are serving the Church in their own country or in another place.

USPG provides training in mission for priests and lay workers whether they go overseas from here or come here from their own country, or are preparing to work at home—wherever home is.

The Society plays a particular role, under Partners in Mission, alerting people to partnership possibilities and helping the world Church, through the movement of people and also through funding, to be transformed from dependence to partnership.

USPG works ecumenically with other Societies, especially in support of the United Churches of the Indian sub-continent.

The Society spends more than £2,500,000 a year. Would you be prepared to help?

Founded 1860 Incorporated by Royal Charter 1935

Reg. No. 208858

The only charity which for over 122 years has existed solely for the relief of elderly or disabled farmers or their dependants who are in need. Over four million pounds have been distributed in Pensions and many other forms of relief to those who suffered loss of health and wealth in their efforts to maintain the productivity of the land on which our national security and well-being so largely depend. Today, the R.A.B.I. is supporting nearly 700 of them.

The Corporation now distributes approximately £630,000 annually in benefactions and owns 49 houses for retired clergymen. Those assisted with grants or pensions include about 560 Clergymen, 900 Widows and over 300 other dependants; in addition educational and maintenance help is given to about 70 Ordinands during their training, and to about 1,276 boys and girls.

The ANNUAL FESTIVAL in St. Paul's Cathedral is normally held in the month of May and anyone wishing to obtain tickets should apply to the Registrar at the address shown above.

Donors of £31·50 and upwards are elected Governors of the Corporation.

LEGACIES are a most important feature in our receipts, and it is hoped that this Corporation, the oldest and most comprehensive Society of its kind, will not be overlooked in these inflationary times.

SUBSCRIPTIONS, DONATIONS, CHURCH and SCHOOL COLLECTIONS, and LEGACIES, in aid of funds or towards the extension of any of the above branches of work, are requested, and will be gratefully acknowledged by the Registrar, who will provide any information required.

CHURCH SOCIETY

Church Society aims to educate and encourage members of the Church of England in an up-to-date understanding of the centrality of the Gospel and Lordship of Jesus Christ in church life and individual commitment.

Church Society seeks to expound the teaching of the Bible as the authoritative Word of God, and affirms the teaching of the Anglican Reformation foundations (the Thirty-nine Articles and the Book of Common Prayer) as the right resources for building up the life of the Church of England as the national church.

THE CHURCH UNION

PRESIDENT: The Rt Revd Dr Eric Kemp, Bishop of Chichester
GENERAL SECRETARY: The Revd Peter Geldard

The CHURCH UNION was founded in 1859 as a result of the great renewal which began in Oxford in 1833, to recall the Church of England to her true Catholic identity, and to ensure that the great truths of the faith are defended and shared with others.

In the 1980s we must not only defend our heritage but make sure that we take the initiative to go forward and bring the faith to others. The Church Union is fully committed to the Catholic Renewal movement, and the aims of both bodies can only be achieved if we have one single united and representative voice speaking on behalf of as many parishes and individuals as possible. The CHURCH UNION is the only organisation with the staff, the premises, and the experience that, with your support, can do this.

Join the Church Union, as an individual or by parish membership, and you will be forwarding the work of Catholic Renewal, qualify for the advice and assistance that the Union can give, and assist the work of THE CHURCH LITERATURE ASSOCIATION, the only independent publishing house committed to the Catholic movement.

Write or telephone for membership details:

THE CHURCH LADS' AND CHURCH GIRLS' BRIGADE

The Church Lads' Brigade and the Church Girls' Brigade, two organisations serving exclusively within the Anglican Communion, have now amalgamated to form one uniformed Anglican Brigade.

This new Brigade combines the gathered experience and expertise of the two partners into a modern, active and effective organisation for young people firmly rooted within the Church of England.

The Incumbent of a parish appoints leaders to work with the young people of the parish and is himself responsible for the Christian Education Programme.

Will you help to preserve England's heritage of ancient and beautiful churches? Over 4,000 churches and chapels have already been helped, but hundreds still urgently need repair. Many of the finest serve small parishes where their upkeep has always been a difficult problem. Funds must be raised to augment local efforts. Grants from the Trust are a valuable stimulus to parishes striving to preserve for posterity the buildings which collectively reflect the history of a thousand years.

And it is a fairly common problem for seamen – away from home for months at a time – but it is only one of the many different troubles that people bring to us. And we are there, ready to give all the help we can, in all parts of the world. Over the years, since our foundation in 1856, seafarers have come to depend on us. They know we care. A SERVICE WE CAN SHARE

Church support strengthens immeasurably the Scouts' aim of developing young people physically, mentally and spiritually so that they may take a constructive place in society; and sponsoring a Scout Group can strengthen the links between church and young people and their families.

There are over 640,000 Scouts in the country. There would be many more if there were Groups to accept them. To find out how sponsoring a Group could help your church to extend its work and service and help us to help more boys, write to:

PREFACE

It is a relief to know that Crockford's Clerical Directory, first published in 1858 and the responsibility of the Oxford University Press since 1921, is assured of a future under the care of the Church of England. It ought to be a useful future. In view of this development a Preface-writer, customarily independent and anonymous, may be permitted to add a few words to the tribute to the present publishers which he paid in the last issue, when readers around the world were celebrating five hundred years of scholarly printing and publishing in Oxford. Now it may be added that an enormous amount of trouble has been taken by the staff of the Press, both in the offices at Neasden and in the Printing Division at Oxford, to bring this Directory's store of information about the Anglican clergy in many nations to perfection — or as near to perfection as was possible for humanity assisted in recent years by a computer. Substantial financial losses have been accepted. The OUP's treatment of Crockford over sixty years has been an example of devotion to duty, of craftsmanship, and of generosity.

Crockford's own problems

However, Crockford has never given much space to eulogies and we take this opportunity to reassert the tradition of Anglican self-criticism, giving truthfulness a higher priority than tactfulness and honesty a higher moral value than optimism. This tradition has had noted expressions in the prefaces written by our predecessors, and although our successors may face the problem of official air being breathed down their necks we should like to give them a sword which has not been blunted. We therefore begin this year's meditation on trends in the Church of England with some thoughts about the reasons why Crockford's Clerical Directory in its old shape became too expensive for its market. These reasons are, we believe, relevant to the problems now being acknowledged increasingly by many other British institutions, including the Church of England.

In order to be comprehensive, Crockford has expensively compiled and printed information some of which in recent years has also been available either in private lists such as the Clerical Register maintained by the Church Commissioners for England or in national, provincial, or diocesan publications such as The Church of England Yearbook. The assembly of such information in one public place was convenient, but it was convenience bought at a price which can no longer be accepted. In future the chief foundation of the Directory will be the Commissioners' Register, and the overlap with other publications will be reduced. The need to economize is familiar to all who struggle with the finances of institutions, and the problem is well known that for a corporate body as for an individual slimming is never so simple to carry out as it is to desire.

Crockford has devoted two-fifths of its space to clergy outside the United Kingdom although less than a tenth of its sales was overseas. Clergymen working outside Europe will very probably not be listed in future issues. We are consoled by the thought that over many years no great disaster struck the clergy of the Episcopal Church in the USA because their names did not appear in this Directory. We offer, too, the reflection that this lessening of the scope of Crockford is a minor illustration of the process in which Britain is being compelled to let go of its imperial past.

Crockford has until now included a variety of pleasant features such as lists of bishops tracing the succession back to the origin of each see, pages naming the rural deans of England, and maps displaying the geography of the dioceses. These features have had to be sacrificed to the need to provide facts at a tolerable price. The sacrifice will disappoint some readers; but here again we have found some consolation. The end of affluence in Britain is not the end of the world. While the need to economize cannot be welcome to a country which until recently was the centre of an empire including a quarter of mankind, and which is still the admired birthplace of the world's leading language and literature, other peoples are flourishing.

Partners in Mission

Because the danger of a post-imperial island becoming exclusively insular is so real, we gladly respond at some length to a bold and unique example of commentary on the Church of England from outside. Sharp comment by outsiders should always be welcomed by an institution; it shows an interest and it makes insiders think. (The debate which the new General Synod held in November 1980 on 'What is the Church for?' had its uses but would have been more valuable if there had been a ruder introduction than the Bishop of Guildford's excellent piece of devotional theology.) To respond with bland platitudes after such provocation would not be a sign of true thankfulness for what we have received.

In June 1981 a National Partners in Mission Consultation provided an occasion when visitors drawn from nine other parts of the Anglican Communion and from eight non-Anglican Churches could say what they thought about the Church of England. It was an inescapable exercise, for since the process was launched by the Anglican Consultative Council in 1973 twenty-eight of the thirty Churches in the Anglican Communion had held PIM Consultations and in a considerable number of these meetings representatives of the Church of England had been eloquent. Since England is well known to have become one of the most secular countries in the world, no one could plausibly deny that the Church of England needed advice about its missionary responsibilities. Nor could anyone argue that it would be courteous or ethical for English Anglicans to distribute advice far and wide without being prepared to take the medicine themselves. But the English Consultation was an inevitably difficult exercise, which is why gratitude is due to visitors prepared to stick their necks into the mouth of a lion of advanced age and uncertain temper. Not only was there no real prospect of other Churches giving much help in manpower or money as well as in exhortations or rebukes — a prospect which must have encouraged other Churches to preserve their courtesy when receiving advice from English visitors. There was also little likelihood that visitors from other Churches would rapidly unravel the complexities of life in the Church of England. Thus the delay in holding the National Consultation in England is excusable. So, too, is the effort to make the discussion precise and useful by confining it to the work of the synods and their boards or committees and of the national voluntary agencies, leaving wider problems to consultations at the diocesan level. There are many problems — the relationship of the Church Commissioners and the General Synod, for example — which are important in ecclesiastical administration and which outsiders equipped with relevant experience and prepared to take time could explore with a stimulating freshness. In the end, though, a National Consultation was inescapable — and it is also understandable that the visitors (who, it must be confessed, were not for the most part people entrusted with leadership in their own Churches) brushed aside any suggestion that the talk should be confined to dry subjects in ecclesiastical administration. An opportunity had come to review the Church of England in the light of their own experience; and they were going to seize it. In the end their report To a Rebellious House? was edited by Canon John Kingsnorth. It was a mixture of unpalatable but nutritious home truths with some suggestions which were stale because the Church of England had already quite often considered and rejected them for good reasons — and with some slogans which, although well intentioned, were less than perfectly baked.

The fresh home truths included criticisms of the Church's central boards and national voluntary agencies. Answers to a questionnaire had 'raised some doubt as to whether the national bodies were facing up to the world in which we live'. While there was 'a growing professionalism and reliance on full-time staff', the staff themselves complained that they were 'in the last resort only advisory, with little initiatory power'. Since the impression left was as vague as that, and was an impression which would have been given by bureaucracies in many of the world's Churches, visitors in a hurry must have found it hard to say exactly what was wrong. Their report shed little light. The visitors were attracted by the idea of merging some voluntary agencies — missionary societies for example, or the societies for helping clergy widows and families (a better example); but since they had no time in which to produce any detailed consideration of the arguments for the existing situation of independence tempered by collaboration, they were unable to produce reasons likely to be accepted by the voluntary agencies as decisive. A request to Bishops' Councils to discuss 'what contribution official and voluntary bodies made to mission in the diocese' elicited little useful response. It probably seemed too reminiscent of an alarming question in an examination, and a quarter of the councils sent in no reply.

One idea which secured a mention in the final report was that there might be an annual meeting of the staffs and key board members of Church's central boards and national voluntary agencies. It would be a gentle piece of training or horizon-widening growing out of the present modest exercise immodestly called Partnership for World Mission. Such a gathering might profitably replace one of the three annual meetings of the General Synod. It might stimulate the pooling of resources and assist the learning of two linked lessons which Mr Giles Ecclestone, the outstandingly able Secretary of the Board for Social Responsibility, said the consultation had helped him to learn — the need to check the 'increasing professionalization and centralization' and the need 'to see things through the eyes of those at the bottom of the heap'.

In their initial assessment of the Church of England as a whole, bravely reproduced in their final report, the 'external partners' lamented the absence of a 'clear vision'. This led to some sensible suggestions for the improvement of the work of the clergy — ecumenical training wherever possible; compilation of a job description to accompany each new appointment; more teamwork and in-service training; training to cope with the stresses and strains to which clergy families are subject; more serious attention to the non-stipendiary ministry and to the permanent diaconate; more sharing of the work (including decision making) with the laity. But other suggestions revealed how little the external partners had been able to study the peculiar opportunities of the Church of England, despite a belated recognition in the last paragraph of this initial assessment. It was claimed that the clergy's 'statutory roles as state baptizers, marriers and buriers' left 'little time for the proclamation of the Gospel' — as if in a secularized society anyone could invent a better opportunity to proclaim salvation to individuals than an interview asked for by people facing marriage, birth, or bereavement. A 'slow separation — step by step — of Church and State' was recommended — as if anyone could ask for a greater chance to proclaim salvation to a society than an act of worship, or a chaplain's or bishop's quiet ministry of influence, which is made possible on the present scale only because the Church of England is recognized as the National Church. The freehold tenure of their offices by the clergy was alleged to prevent 'any accountability of clergy to people, to those granting the benefices, or even to God' — as if the experience of bishops and ecclesiastical courts seeking to terminate the rare cases of a breakdown in a pastoral relationship had not included a stout defence of the local man by parishioners who resented any outside interference.

Obviously some parish priests do spend too much time baptizing, marrying, or consoling people who thereafter never come to church; obviously some aspects of the Church-State connection do need reform; and obviously the present provisions for ending a pastoral relationship would need strengthening were it ever to be felt that many unsatisfactory pastors deserved ejection. But it is no use having a vision which is 'clear' if the eye is not directed to the actual scene in England, where on the whole the hard-pressed clergy are known to labour devotedly in the service both of their congregations and of the wider community.

Parts of the initial assessment of the Church of England by these external partners reminded us how wounding partnership can be (however unintentionally) when to be external is to be aloof, not condescending to make detailed criticisms or constructive suggestions. 'The Church is failing in its ministry to youth. . . . As we have gone round the dioceses our overwhelming impression has been of near empty churches. The liturgy does not speak to the people. . . .' These were the impressions left by two Sundays in seventeen dioceses. There is a tragic truth in them, but it is not the whole truth. Other parts of the initial assessment displayed a sad insensitivity to the reasons why some recent proposals for change have been resisted in the Church of England.

Two examples may be cited. To the 'external partners' the old system of the private patronage of parishes seemed an abuse which ought simply to be abolished. The calling of a pastor by the diocese and the Parochial Church Council acting together is a tendency which we applaud, but it is insensitive not to notice that under the current, far more cautious, Benefices Measure a good many Parochial Church Councils seem likely to want to keep their private patrons (with reduced powers) for many years yet. Again: the ordination of women to the priesthood is said to be 'inevitable' because it 'witnesses to the world that men and women are equal in the sight of God'. That is a conclusion with which we agree, but it is insensitive to omit even to consider the objections which are made with passion on theological or ecumenical (or even biblical) grounds. The Church of England seeks to include conservatives as well as radicals happily in its ranks and to reach out in mutual understanding to fellow Catholics as well as to fellow Protestants in other Churches. That noble tradition accounts for the acceptability of so many checks and balances in the present system of ecclesiastical government, including the need to secure large majorities in all three Houses of the General Synod after consultation with the Diocesan Synods. The Church is right to be tender to the consciences of its own conservatives, who feel themselves to be allied with large numbers who are even more conservative in other Churches. The model of Parliamentary democracy, where a majority of one is enough, is not to be copied within a Church ready to pay the price of Christian charity and comprehensiveness.

By the time that the final report of the Consultation was drafted some of the initial reactions by the external partners had been toned down in discussion. For example, the final version tells us that 'we do not propose any effort to restructure the Establishment'. What was proposed instead was a change in attitude and atmosphere, making the Church of England more clearly a home for all age groups and all classes. Such a change is obviously desirable but is specially difficult for a body so long identified with the State, with the mature, and with the privileged. No attempt was made to explore sociological realities, but had such an attempt been made the sensible conclusion might have been reached that the Church of England's biggest opportunity to become less hoity-toity lies in reunion with Methodism and Roman Catholicism. The 'difficulty experienced in reaching mutual understanding and agreement about evangelism' was confessed — and was illustrated by the inclusion of two rival statements, equally forgettable. Other difficult problems were shirked. The section on the work of the General Synod failed to work out the implications of a comment reported from an Australian partner, deploring 'the enormous loss of time for mission by your leading people attending meetings'. The same visitor's comment on 'the general lack of obvious prayerfulness, or at least spontaneity in prayer' was met only by the recommendation that people 'need more teaching about prayer'.

Two themes not prominent in the initial assessment were at this final stage developed into recommendations which we believe to be profoundly mistaken. Church schools were discouraged; 'only those which can be seen to have a particular mission in the community as a whole' should be retained. Yet almost all of these schools have waiting lists of parents anxious to use them, and to throw them away when there is no financial need to do so would be to abandon the chief mission which they already discharge acceptably. It is not nearly so certain that sixth form colleges and institutions of further education would be willing to welcome 'new patterns of ministry' as recommended.

Secondly, it was urged that the Church Commissioners should cease to fulfil the main purpose for which they were set up in 1836 since 'by 1995 the costs of parochial ministerial stipends should cease to be a charge on the Commissioners' funds'. The external partners added that 'the Commissioners should immediately be put under the authority of the General Synod' and should change their investment policy since 'the present income seems inadequate'. With or without changes in investments (left conveniently unspecified), the Commissioners' assets would be inadequate for all the 'wider purposes' to which the income would be applied if these visitors had their way. We can, however, be certain that there would be a drastic reduction of the full-time parochial ministry, particularly in inner-city and rural areas. More than half the cost of the stipends of the parochial clergy is still met by the Commissioners, although the proportion has been falling. Plainly there is room for improvement in giving by the Anglican laity in England; the contrast with North American standards is great. But it should be remembered that it is very difficult to change a reliance on endowments, an attitude inherited in England as it is not in North America; and that the (allegedly priest-ridden) Roman Catholic communicants in England, who seem to be about equal in numbers to the regular Anglican communicants, support about half the number of clergy, all of whom are celibates.

Anyway, how much freedom do we have? The Commissioners already enjoy and exercise some elasticity in the making of grants (for example, to church buildings in new housing areas), and the General Synod might well request them to subsidize some other good causes, but the large-scale diversion of funds to 'wider purposes' would be a clear breach of trust, since the endowments held by the Commissioners were in every case given for the support of the clergy. On this ground Parliament would be almost certain to veto it, and would be almost universally praised for doing so. It is not as if Anglican churchgoers need to raid the Commissioners' funds in order to fulfil their duties to the poor; for churchgoers, in addition to their voluntary giving which is very considerable, pay taxes in order to sustain a still-elaborate Welfare State. Nor is it as if the Commissioners had money to spare. They reported that in 1980 18p in every £1 of their income went to clergy pensions or retirement lump sums and that this proportion is bound to increase. Recently the conditions of the retired clergy, particularly in housing, have been improved and great credit is due to the Pensions Board; it would be tragic if this act of justice were to be undone or if those of the clergy who will retire in the next ten years (an alarming number) were to be faced by poverty for themselves and their widows. Almost seventy per cent of the Commissioners' income now goes to the pay and housing of the working clergy, yet since only a third of the total pay of the clergy comes from giving, the national minimum for incumbents from 1 April 1982 is just over £100 a week before tax. Curates have to make do on less. Poverty can be known by priests whose children are at school and whose wives do not work outside the home and parish.

'I look for a revived Church of England in a revived England — nothing less.' So the Archbishop of York, who had acted as chairman, summed up the impact made on his mind by the Partners in Mission at a great Eucharist for the General Synod in York Minster. We have no wish to dispute that revival is both needed and possible; but surely for this purpose what most needs to be revived is the conviction of the English that what Christianity says about God and man is true. Yet the question of religious belief was mentioned during the Consultation only in an oblique manner. The failure to regard popular scepticism about religious claims as the chief problem provides an astonishing example of how absorbed the Church, in England or overseas, can be in issues which are trivial in comparison with the 'death of God' experienced by so many of the twentieth-century English and other Europeans. All the committees in the Church, however radically reorganized, cannot by themselves produce one commitment to believe and trust in God through Christ in the power of the Holy Spirit. The clergy know better than anyone else the main reason why the Church's liturgy (Tudor or neo-Elizabethan) does not speak to the people: it is that the people see no need to assemble in order to worship God. The same simple explanation accounts for much of the moral anarchy: the people see no need to obey the commandments of God. It is undeniable that more teaching about prayer is needed. The crucial question is what that teaching is to be. What, for example, is the Christian doing when he intercedes? There are hints given in Bishop Michael Ramsey's Be Still and Know, his 1982 gift to the Church, which deserve to be developed and popularized.

To acknowledge the seriousness of the rejection of Christian belief and behaviour in so much of English life is of great importance in the pastoral care of the faithful; for while it is no doubt true that many churches could be fuller if their local leaders thoroughly accepted the principles advocated by the PIM external partners (and by many others who write or speak about evangelism and Church growth), it is also true that in many areas the most dedicated clergy or laity would be foolish to expect a large harvest of recruits. Some areas may be more favourable ground than others, for reasons which can be analysed sociologically — the family-conscious outer suburb, for example, or the proudly historic country town. Some churches are more favourably placed than others; for example, a definitely Evangelical pulpit can attract adherents from many other parishes. But thanks to urbanization and the media the English culture is remarkably unified, and its unity has grown remote from organized religion — whatever the organization may be. The evangelist who ignores this is risking a broken heart.

It is understandable that the external partners failed to address themselves to the present English inability to believe strongly in God. Many Christians, particularly in Africa, Latin America, or India, belong to cultures where the presence of God is still usually taken for granted and the most urgent task confronting the Church is to identify it more with the people, destroying the image of Christianity as the white colonialist's religion. In the USA the habit of churchgoing is still widespread and piety commends a politician. It is natural that partners coming from such religious backgrounds should fail to notice the extent to which the tide of faith has withdrawn from the shores of England, but should instead concentrate on removing sociological barriers to church membership. Thus the General Synod was criticized in the PIM report not because it is usually too gentlemanly to mention God, or to examine its neighbours' reasons for ignoring God more systematically, but because it is too gentlemanly to include enough women, workers, or young people. Miss Jenny Bond, a young Roman Catholic, was right to assure the General Synod that it was 'utterly crazy' to meet midweek; but more weekend synods would not automatically fill churches. She made the mistake in drawing from the interest in 'transcendental meditation and all that sort of thing' the conclusion that 'there is in this country a real hunger for spiritual renewal and prayer'. Alas, that is not true on any large scale about non-churchgoers. There is much emptiness — but, as parish priests who visit widely know, not much hunger. A General Synod meeting at weekends and fully feminine, proletarian, and young would still not seem relevant to many women, workers, or young people, because religion does not seem relevant. While indifference to God marks so much of English life (although the English, disliking all theories, do not care to say outright that there is no God), many ecclesiastical documents and consultations on 'mission' are defective because they suggest that the Church's reorganization in order to be more inclusive is what matters most.

A Diocesan Consultation

Several dioceses in the Church of England have derived great benefit from being hosts to Partners in Mission Consultations. A report to the Oxford Diocesan Synod in October 1981 may be taken as an example. More modest than the national report, it is also more useful, partly because external partners are more likely to feel at home with the problems and joys of congregations and counties than with unique national structures; and partly because the quality of a report must depend on the quality of its authors, curiously higher in the visitation of the Oxford diocese than in the visitation of the Church of England. Another reason seems to be that the Church is itself at its best in parish and diocese rather than in the national committee. In some ways it is a pity that the Church of England still has the resources to attempt so much at the national level. The General Synod and its committees and central services now cost more than £2,250,000 a year. Although this sum is too little to meet all the demands made on the dedicated staff of these central bodies (and Sir Ronald Harris has pointed out that the amount spent on central purposes other than training 'has been nearly halved in real terms during the last decade'), in relation to the financial problems of parishes and parishioners £2,250,000 feels like too much.

The analysis in this report to a diocese took the same line as the national report but went deeper. 'We have met a great many able and dedicated people and seen much excellent work. Yet behind all the ability, sophistication, and material wealth we have detected a spiritual hunger and a longing for something that will give meaning to life.

Many people, both clergy and laity, feel a deep loneliness and isolation leading to a loss of direction and sense of failure which is only deepened by the contemplation of the apparently "successful" efforts of others.' It was recognized that 'in most places evangelism sprang from a powerful experience of God'. The line of argument was then somewhat deflected from the central problem of England's spiritual vacuum, largely perhaps because 'partnership' was felt to be the necessary theme. The theme lured the partners into stating 'the truth that we can only survive if we minister to one another at all levels' — a proposition which, if left standing by itself, is godless.

The more detailed recommendations were more worthy of Christianity as a religion of partnership with God. Among them we noted pleas for more, and more biblical, preaching; more contemporary prayer; more lay participation in worship ('some services give the impression of a show going on independently of the people's presence' and 'we were sorry to have left our binoculars at home because without them we could hardly see where the priest had gone'); more effective training for children and adolescents ('family services are "nice" but cannot be a substitute for educational effort' and 'the main loss of the young takes place at the age of 12+'); more house groups ('in many places the tools for the renewal of Christian life'); and more contact between the chaplains in industry, hospitals, prisons, colleges, etc. and parish priests. The concentration on making prayer more real did not prevent some down-to-earth comments on the administration of the diocese, including a suggestion that it was time that an Evangelical was appointed as an area bishop or archdeacon. Nor did the recognition of a certain spiritual hunger within the Church prevent the acknowledgment of strong points: 'This diocese is rich in resources, in theological learning, in people of experience and influence in public life, in economic prosperity, in growing points of technological advance, in churches of beauty and sanctity, in religious communities with an inheritance of devotion and entailed wealth.' Always when commenting on the Church of England it is fatal to forget either its present lack of spiritual power or the abundance of its inherited glory.

Anglican–Roman Catholic agreement?

The final report of the Anglican/Roman Catholic International Commission, published in March 1982 after work which began in 1967, was so concise, so careful, and so deliberately couched in terminology familiar only to theologians that many laymen have wondered what all the fuss has been about; and it is indeed important not to exaggerate the significance of the consensus which has been achieved by a commission composed of scholarly men who are courteous and (more or less) liberal in their temper of mind. What needs to take place is nothing less than the healing of the wounds inflicted on the Body of Christ by the Reformation and the Counter-Reformation. In that crisis in the sixteenth century a number of scholarly and eirenic attempts to combine the best of Catholicism and Protestantism in a revival of the simplicities of the religion of the gospels came to nothing because on each side the emotional, sociological, and political drives towards separation were too strong for the peacemakers. In the twentieth century a great deal more than an accord between selected theologians will be necessary before the two streams of the Anglican Communion and the Roman Catholic Church can flow on to a visible reunion.

On the Anglican side the psychological change which is necessary is the confession that it is no longer appropriate to be an Anglican in any exclusive sense. When the Church of England was established under the Tudors the claim was made that it was the only valid Christian and Catholic Church in the land; the claim, celebrated in theology by Richard Hooker, was enforced by executions. Not until a century and a half ago was it thought safe to allow Roman Catholics to sit in Parliament, so bitter was the 'No Popery' cry in response to various seventeenth-century provocations from the Gunpowder Plot to the follies of James II. Still in the 1980s it is constitutionally necessary for the monarch to be a Protestant. The overseas expansion of the work of the clergy of the Church of England in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries was often in rivalry with Roman Catholic missions and an appeal was often made to the protection of this Protestant Crown. During the first sixty years or so of our own century the emphasis was all on the growth of the Anglican Communion in extent and in depth of churchmanship, and one reason was that the spiritual link with the Church of England continued to be part of a strong colonial, or at least cultural, link between peoples. Still in the 1980s Anglican gatherings seldom act (although they sometimes talk) as if awaiting the merging of the thirty Anglican Churches into wider fellowships. The Church of England in particular is still full of people who value their heritage so highly that in their hearts they find no real wish to see it changed.

The ARCIC report is, however, a challenge to Anglicans to acknowledge some growing spiritual realities. The nation fashioned by the Tudors is gradually moving back into the European community which has a strong Catholic element — as the Church of England has been reminded by the inauguration of the diocese of Gibraltar-in-Europe. Already England contains a large, thoroughly settled, Roman Catholic community, thanks mainly to Irish immigration — as the Pope's Pastoral visit in 1982 must remind the world. The Papal visit is also to be understood as a reminder to England that the world exists — that Christianity is international, although not now in a Victorian style. The British Empire has been dissolved and it can only be a matter of time before the Anglican Communion, which was in many ways its ecclesiastical counterpart, is also dissolved. Above all, Anglicans and Roman Catholics know that they share important convictions as minorities in various non-Christian cultures, and as traditional Churches surrounded by sectarian forms of Christianity, and they find themselves co-operating in order to reaffirm a heritage which they believe to be greater than any national glory. These realities are beginning to inspire a longing for a truly international embodiment of the Catholic tradition with its capacity to breed saints.

On the Roman Catholic side the psychological change which is necessary is a confession that it is no longer appropriate to be Roman in Church government. The response to the Reformation was to centralize authority and to standardize doctrine and devotion. That far more definite and militant variety of Catholicism sustained a remarkably effective mission in many unfavourable territories, including Protestant England and the British colonies. It reached its peak at the First Vatican Council in 1870, at the very time when the Papacy lost the remnants of its temporal power. But the Counter-Reformation has been visibly collapsing ever since the death of Pius XII. Many of the demands of the sixteenth-century Reformers are being accepted in essence although the circumstances are so different that the lack of acknowledgement is excusable. The basic change is to bring a more educated laity fully into the worship of the Church — a move which must have consequences in the whole of the Church's life. One of the consequences is far more emphasis on the Bible, which the laity can read as well as the clergy. Another is the admission that centralization and standardization have become unrealistic, despite the love which still surrounds the Holy Father. Another is a welcome to the demand for a restatement of Catholicism coming from Roman Catholics who, while devout, are also citizens of the age of democracy and science. These trends were all to be observed in the National Pastoral Congress at Liverpool in May 1980.

When ARCIC tackled the apparently technical subjects of the Eucharist, the Ministry, and Authority, these were the spiritual realities in the background. This joint commission moved away from a view of the priesthood which the popular preaching of the Counter-Reformation developed from popular medieval piety: a view of the priest that saw a man apart and above, given by the bishop the power to make bread and wine into the Body and Blood of Christ, to make a fresh sacrifice of Christ in the Mass, and to make this fresh sacrifice efficacious as an intercession on behalf of the living and the dead. With this view of the priesthood went (in piety if not in strict logic) the exaltation of the Blessed Virgin Mary and of the Pope as being in their different ways indispensable channels in the distribution of Christ's grace. In the thinking of ARCIC the Mass has been set firmly in the context of the community, the Church. The Eucharist is seen as the making effective in the present of the one sacrifice of himself offered by Christ — not a repetition of that sacrifice but a special kind of memorial in which Christ is present and active, offering himself to faithful Christians in communion. It is also seen as an intercessory act by and on behalf of the whole Church, militant and departed, in which the faithful plead before the Father the merits of Christ's life, death, and resurrection — the sole ground on which sinful humanity is entitled to stand. The bread and wine do not change physically but their significance is altered, and the faithful receive them as much more than bread and wine. Talk about their 'substance' is outmoded, but what is believed about this sacrament is no mere Zwinglian memorialism. The weary old controversies are thus transcended, and those who were present at the Windsor meeting in 1971 still remember the almost terrified silence, lasting some minutes, which followed the realization that substantial agreement about the Eucharist had been reached — an agreement holding out hope of a common understanding of priesthood.

The ordained ministry is also set within the Christian community. It is an expression of the eternal Christ's own work in that community, and those ministers of Christ who exercise oversight (episcope) do so in order to enable all the people to use the gifts of the Holy Spirit which they have received. Authority in the Church is now understood as a service for the sake of its fellowship, not as a lordship to be justified legally. The primacy of the Bishop of Rome is valued as a focus of the world-wide unity of Christians, and although normally the Church's decisions are taken in parish, diocese, or council, it is said to be right for the Pope to express the whole Church's faith in emergencies. The Church is preserved by Christ from falling into serious and permanent error; thus it is maintained in the truth which is pre-eminently set forth in the Bible. It is claimed that the dogmas that the Blessed Virgin Mary was 'kept free from all stain of original sin' and was 'in body and soul assumed into heavenly glory' — dogmas proclaimed by Popes as binding on all the faithful in 1854 and 1950 — are to be understood as expressions of truths which all the faithful do believe: that the salvation won by Christ was operative among all mankind before his birth, and that his mother's glory in heaven involves full participation in the fruits of that salvation. The term 'infallibility' is applicable unconditionally only to God, and the teaching ministry of the Pope can be understood better in less dangerous terms.

The first Anglican responses to these agreements have already shown that some questions remain. Is it possible that Roman Catholicism is really prepared to meet the protests of the Churches of the Reformation and the probings of the children of a science-based society? As the Anglican Consultative Council noted, many of these suspicions can be allayed if attention is also given to the agreements resulting from regional and international discussions between Lutherans and Roman Catholics. There 'justifying faith', or trust in God the Father through Christ in the power of the Holy Spirit, is distinguished both from the performance of ecclesiastical duties and from the acceptance of propositions taught by ecclesiastical authority. Luther's central point is thus met — but without lapsing into the individualism and emotionalism which have sometimes disfigured Protestantism. As for the interpretation of the Marian dogmas offered by ARCIC, we are assured that it is the kind of interpretation which is often offered to students in the Roman Catholic seminaries of Europe and North America. It is an interpretation likely to encourage increasing numbers of Anglicans to pay more attention to Mary's place in the story of our salvation.

The largest theological change now in mind is, it is clear, a growth away from Counter-Reformation categories of thought in the Roman Catholic Church. At least in Europe and North America the theology of ARCIC represents what many educated Roman Catholic laymen and intellectual priests believe nowadays. Roman Catholic bishops are, however, famous for being more sensitive to the pastoral needs of simple believers than to the discontents of the educated. In Germany their conflicts with academic theologians commanding large student followings, including Hans Küng, have recently been notorious. Elsewhere — extensively in the USA, for example — they have found themselves unable to communicate with some of their ablest priests, who have requested laicization in a mood of despair. Students, with their questioning but idealistic minds, have felt fewer vocations to serve such an authoritarian Church; the French statistics of decline are startling. Yet the ecclesiastical authorities have not read these signs of the times as any kind of instruction to alter traditions which they believe to have been entrusted to them. On the contrary, the prevailing tendency is to reaffirm traditions. In the Netherlands, for example, conservatism has been reimposed thanks to the power of Rome in episcopal appointments, while in Africa the rule of priestly celibacy has been maintained (at least in theory) despite its result, a disastrous shortage of priests. The Jesuits have been disciplined for 'progressivism'. It therefore remains to be seen how far the Vatican will bless the agreements reached by ARCIC. The final report was subjected to an ominous delay before publication was authorized. The wars waged by recent Popes against modernism, and against any existential or demythologized emphasis in theology, are too recent for the new liberal tendency to be expected to gain much official ground rapidly. The probability is that years will pass before the theological revolution can be seen to have reached the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith — and even then there will be a great reluctance to admit that anything essential has altered.

Parallel with this development within Roman Catholicism there must be an increasing willingness among Anglicans to think in terms wider than Anglicanism and to hope for reunion with Rome as the fulfilment of the Reformation. This willingness will, we believe, be voiced with varying degrees of clarity as the different Anglican provinces respond to the work of ARCIC: the response in Sydney will be more hesitant than the response in Accra. For the time being each development, Roman Catholic or Anglican, must be allowed its own integrity, which might be compromised were there to be premature attempts at any merger of the two Communions. Canterbury to Rome and back is a long journey, allowing no short cuts.

Three practical problems

While these parallel developments take their time, three practical problems must arouse the concern of all who seek the reconciliation of the Anglican Communion with the Roman Catholic Church.

The recognition of Anglican Orders is already an accomplished fact in the shape of acts of courtesy to visiting clergy in some areas of the world, but it seldom occurs in England and the outright condemnation by Pope Leo XIII in 1896 (Apostolicae Curae) presents a major problem at the official and international level. It is most unlikely that any Pope will simply tear that bull up. It was essentially an assessment of the history of the sixteenth century, and it cannot be faulted for its assertion that the English Ordinal of 1552 was, and was intended to be, firmly on the Protestant side as the Catholic-Protestant division was then understood. What it said then was no more than had already been said by the bishops appointed under Mary I and by generations of Recusants who also rejected the Elizabethan 'settlement' of religion. Moreover, since the age of the Reformation the difficulty of recognizing Anglican clergymen as Catholic bishops, priests, or deacons has been exacerbated by their frequently obvious dependence on the patronage of the Crown, a dependence particularly noticed by Irish Catholics.

The work of ARCIC, however, leads naturally to the conclusion that the Anglican clergy have exercised a valid ministry of the Word and sacraments within the Anglican Communion, preserving at least in name the scriptures, the ecumenical creeds, and the threefold Catholic ministry (much to the indignation of many other Protestants). That is now seen to matter more than the precise words or actions employed in their ordinations. The crucial questions are whether the Anglican Communion is a part of the Church of Christ, and whether the Anglican intention when ordaining priests is compatible with the Roman Catholic Church's intention. The work of ARCIC suggests clearly that the answer to both questions is yes, so that the question of Anglican Orders has been put in a new context. Hopes of Pope John Paul II making a dramatic concession in return for English hospitality are naïve, but it will be surprising if Apostolicae Curae has not been supplemented, and in effect replaced, by a fresh declaration before 1996.

Already invitations to Anglicans to communion at Roman Catholic altars are issued, but these invitations are unofficial except where there is 'serious spiritual need' such as a lack of access to Anglican sacraments. When Lord Coggan, then Archbishop of Canterbury, praised the practice and asked for its extension during sermons in Rome and in Westminster Cathedral the effect was, we understand, to cause great offence and to harden the official teaching that communion must follow, not precede, agreement in doctrine. However, here again the work of ARCIC has put an old question into a new context. As agreement about the Eucharist and the Ministry is more and more widely recognized, it seems likely that the obligation to offer hospitality at the Lord's table will be accepted at the official level as well as privately. Gradually the feeling may increase that it would be right for the Roman Catholic Church to covenant for unity by the recognition and reconciliation of the ministries of Churches now divided. When they grow impatient, Anglicans do well to remember that until recently it was in many provinces the standard Anglican teaching that there was insufficient agreement with other Churches of the Reformation to warrant official 'intercommunion'; the report which marked the change of conviction in the Church of England was published as recently as 1968. It would be a sign that Anglicans have taken the Roman Catholic position seriously were the Lambeth Conference of 1988 to express a strong hope (stronger than was possible in 1978) for the restoration of communion with the Bishop of Rome.

Already many 'mixed marriages' are celebrated in Anglican churches and the children of them receive a religious education which is Roman Catholic or Anglican or both according to their parents' conscientious wishes. The requirements that the Roman Catholic partner in such a marriage should insist on his or her church as the setting and sign an undertaking to secure the baptism and education of any children in his or her faith are no longer invariable (Matrimonia Mixta, 1970). A dispensation for a mixed marriage can be granted after only a verbal promise to do all in the partner's power in this direction, and the 1976 joint report on Anglican-Roman Catholic Marriage suggested as an alternative that it should be deemed sufficient for the Roman Catholic parish priest to certify that he had reminded the partner concerned of his or her obligations. While it would greatly improve the ecumenical situation if this alternative were to become standard practice, it seems unlikely that the Roman Catholic Church will in the near future formally recognize the rights of both parents to determine their children's education by agreement. That must wait upon a more extensive recognition of the limitations of the disciplinary rights of the clergy. The timing of the formal acceptance of artificial contraception seems to involve similar considerations and expectations. However, all the evidence suggests that in many countries (including Britain) most Roman Catholic married couples have already decided to ignore the Papal teaching both in bed and in the confessional, whereas in mixed marriages the common practice appears to favour the stronger, Roman Catholic, position where there is any real religious education at all. The results can arouse great resentment, particularly in the Republic of Ireland where the numbers of Anglicans have diminished.

To sum up: the recognition of Anglican Orders, official intercommunion, and equality in mixed marriages all depend on the growing acceptance on both sides of the doctrinal agreements which ARCIC has now outlined prophetically.

Covenanting with Free Churches

If we comment more narrowly on Towards Visible Unity, the 1980 report proposing a covenant between the Church of England, the Methodists, the Moravians, and the United Reformed Church, the reason is not that we think it insignificant in comparison with the work of ARCIC. It seems right to pursue negotiations with the Roman Catholic Church and with the Free Churches with equal determination, since it is the Anglican vocation to preserve both the Catholic vision and the Reformation insights in order to prepare the way for a truly international and renewed Catholicism. The explanation of the narrower range of our comment is simply that we write before the 1982 votes in the highest courts of the participating Churches. At the moment it seems likely that the Methodist Conference will repeat the almost unanimous acceptance of the proposals registered as its preliminary response in 1981; that the United Reformed Church, which contains elements strongly anti-episcopalian because of Presbyterian or Congregationalist traditions, will ask for a clarification of the proposed role of bishops; and that the voting in the General Synod of the Church of England will, mainly as a result of continuing hesitations in the House of Clergy, end up somewhere between the decisive yes and the decisive no. With such a prospect in view it seems sensible to add to the general support for 'covenanting' offered in previous Prefaces some thoughts about the Anglican opposition.

This has been less substantial than at the time of the Anglican-Methodist reunion scheme because then the opposition included some (not all) Evangelicals who objected to the proposed rite which could be interpreted as the episcopal ordination of individual Methodist ministers. No such rite is included in the present plan. The opposition then included also many eloquent conservatives, headed by Lord Fisher of Lambeth, who feared the unsettling effects of moving by definite stages towards union. The present plan is not a union scheme and after the proposed covenant the Church of England would still be free to retain its Establishment and other oddities which it is said to hold dear. Another factor is that since Lord Fisher's day the pace of change has accelerated in the Church and although churchgoers are often conservatives they less often have the energy left to be militants, except when fearing for the future of the Book of Common Prayer in view of the widespread use of the Alternative Service Book. The Prayer Book (Protection) Bill introduced into Parliament did represent a substantial body of opinion, particularly among those who without going to church regularly like to think that the 'language of Shakespeare' is still in use outside the theatre; but that manifesto by alarmed peers and MPs never became an Established Church (Protection) Act.

Vocal opposition to the covenanting plan has, in fact, been largely confined to the Catholic movement in the Church of England. Although this may seem curious when we note the protests within the Free Churches (for example, in 95 Theses affixed to Canterbury Cathedral) that the plan is a sell-out to Catholicism, such opposition may well be decisive in the terms of ecclesiastical politics. Not all Anglicans who greatly value Catholicism oppose the plan, but the present officers of the English Church Union, allied with other 'Catholic societies', have thrown themselves into the battle and some 'Catholic spokesmen' have been implacably opposed. Their hostility has alarmed some, perhaps many, who are reluctant to risk sacrificing the unity of the Church of England to the cause of unity with Churches which in England are much smaller and are believed to be declining. The main arguments deployed by Anglican 'Catholic' spokesmen therefore deserve examination.

By far the strongest argument is that the plan would move the Church of England further from the possibility of reconciliation with the Roman Catholic Church on the basis of agreement about Catholic 'faith and order'. It would mean that ministers or presbyters who had not been episcopally ordained would be recognized as able to preside at Eucharists in Anglican churches if invited. In an article in The Times in 1978 Bishop Christopher Butler, a distinguished Roman Catholic scholar and ecumenist, warned that such a recognition 'would cast doubt on the acceptance by the Church of England of the doctrine of the ordained ministry agreed by ARCIC'. In a letter to The Times in 1982 Bishop Alan Clark, Co-Chairman of ARCIC and Chairman of the Roman Catholic Ecumenical Commission for England and Wales, stated: 'I fail to see how certain constituent elements in Anglicanism are adequately safeguarded' if the covenant proposals 'are accepted as they stand'. Bishop Clark instanced the failure of the plan to confer ministry by episcopal ordination; 'we do not find that the selective ordination or ordination by proxy conforms to the accepted tradition of the Church'.

There has been concern among Catholic-minded Anglicans at the prospect of the Church of England recognizing women ministers as true presbyters of the Catholic Church, since it is believed that no one branch of the Catholic Church has the right to alter the priesthood unilaterally. Although bishops would be consecrated from among the Methodist or URC ministers, there has also been concern at the danger of confusion about the bishop's role. Bishops of the Church of England would, it is feared, not be able to follow their consciences by forbidding women to preside at the Eucharist — and by being compelled to engage in 'common decision making' with Free Church leaders they might find themselves and their flocks trapped in a bureaucratic jungle. The erosion of the episcopal office also seemed to be implied in the decision to allow some URC moderators to continue to function without being made bishops and in the lack of insistence on a record of ministers who had participated personally in the services held to recognize and accept them. These points, together with concern that the diaconate would be absent from the ministry of one of the covenanting Churches and that the lay celebration of Holy Communion might continue, were the grounds of the disquiet expressed in the Memorandum of Dissent added to the 1980 report. The dissentients were Dr Graham Leonard (now Bishop of London), Canon Peter Boulton (now Prolocutor of the Convocation of Canterbury), and Mr O.W.H. Clarke (now Chairman of the House of Laity) — a formidable trio. Their points reappeared in later opposition to the scheme, together with others of less substance.

A debate in the General Synod during 1981 ended with majorities in favour, but in the House of Clergy these majorities were at two points less than the two-thirds majority which will be required before an effective yes can be delivered in 1982. The subsequent debates in the Diocesan Synods showed a roughly similar pattern. This element of disquiet added weight to the Archbishop of Canterbury's plea for changes, although plainly no changes can be made in the plan while the Churches concerned are still voting on it. Writing as we do before the 1982 vote in the General Synod, it seems possible that some changes might be made after that vote which might in due course secure overwhelming Anglican support for a covenant. These changes are, we think, desirable however the vote goes.

The developments we should like to see include a much clearer statement of the Roman Catholic position or positions. As things are, some confusion has been left by the fact that the Episcopal Conference of England and Wales has never been pressed to make any solid response. While declining to 'covenant' (for reasons which have always been obvious), the bishops have declared that they would 'continue and increase collaboration in the search for unity with Churches able to covenant in terms of the Ten Propositions' and that they welcomed the prospect of a Common Ordinal with a 'common doctrine of ministry incorporating episcopal, presbyteral, and lay roles'. One of the two official observers on the Churches' Council for Covenanting, Father John Coventry, S.J., has been eloquent in his defence of the 1980 plan and of the theology behind it. In his 1982 Times letter Bishop Clark wrote that 'a Roman Catholic should be grateful for an initiative which has a certain greatness in its vision' and he cited the Episcopal Conference's recent public assurance of 'close and sympathetic attention'. Is it too much to hope that the authorities of the Roman Catholic Church will be challenged to say constructively how they think the plan should be improved, and that a brief renegotiation of the covenant will attach great importance to this brotherly contribution? If the answer is that the Roman Catholic Church cannot make an agreed, official comment because opinion is divided, it would be valuable to have that situation acknowledged and registered.

We do not suggest the introduction of a rite which could be interpreted as acknowledging the necessity of episcopal ordination for Methodist or URC ministers. Such a rite would not command adequate support in Methodism, the URC, or the Church of England. In the Memorandum of Dissent, as in much other recent thought in the Anglican Communion, we find a 'whole-hearted' statement that 'it is not for any covenanting Church to affirm or deny anything about the sufficiency of the ministry of its own Church prior to the point of covenanting'. We find also 'real thanksgiving' that 'from the time of covenanting onwards all our Churches shall have bishops and shall be pledged for the future to episcopal ordering'. Here is, we believe, that basic sympathy with the plan to be expected from men of integrity willing to serve actively on the Churches' Council for Covenanting, which used their talents for drafting at several key points where Anglo-Catholic criticism was expected (although Mr Clarke resigned in 1982). It is not a plan which involves 'selective ordination' or 'ordination by proxy'; in the proposed service no one is ordained except those who have not already been ordained anywhere — and they are ordained episcopally. Yet surely the proposed act of recognition and reconciliation in the setting of the Eucharist can be further improved in wording, so as to make yet clearer the incorporation of ordained Methodist (or other) ministers into the Catholic ministry as retained by the Church of England? Surely, too, records can be kept by bishops of which ministers took the trouble to be present at a national or regional service, and only those ministers could be licensed to take services in the Church of England? And surely the alarm about a 'bureaucratic jungle' can be answered by a plea for time in which sensible bishops sharing a common consecration can find how to work together — and by a reminder of the great damage to the Christian mission inflicted by the present disunity? The parallel existence of Uniate Churches has for long been accepted as a necessity when thinking in terms of a reconciliation to Rome.

The question of women presbyters is often thought to be the real stumbling block in securing 'Catholic' consent to the plan. It needs to be seen, we suggest, in the global context of the Anglican Communion. There are now several hundred canonically ordained Anglican priests who are women; that is a fact with which the Roman Catholic Church has already come to terms as it has continued to converse and to collaborate with the Anglican Communion. It is amazing and saddening that the General Synod of the Church of England has not yet allowed such priests to celebrate the Eucharist at its altars when invited to do so by the incumbent with the approval of the bishop and of the Parochial Church Council. This needs to be put right rapidly. To deny parishes this freedom seems a denial of the unity of the Anglican Communion — and of the right of the Anglican majority (supported in this instance by some well-known Roman Catholic theologians) to follow its conscience. When this anomaly is corrected, it ought to be easier to allow English women ordained within Methodism or the URC to minister to Anglicans if invited after their incorporation into the priesthood as known in the Church of England. And the recognition of the Church of England's own deaconesses as being in Holy Orders ought also to ease the situation. Women are not admitted to the priesthood in the Church of England, and probably will not be for another ten years or so, but a psychological barrier will be broken when deaconesses are entitled to wear clerical dress, to be called 'the Reverend', and to appear in Crockford's Clerical Directory. But it would still be vital to protect the rights of a bishop to veto such invitations in his diocese (preferably with the agreement of his synod) and of an incumbent or church council to refuse to bow to pressure to issue an invitation. Every troubled conscience deserves respect.

However, the conscience of the majority which thinks reunion a part of Christian obedience also deserves respect. With some such improvements and reassurances, the plan to covenant ought to commend itself as the vital move in the healing of divisions which ought never to have been allowed to afflict the Body of Christ and which have in fact poisoned English history. It ought also to lead into a process of reunion which other Churches, including the Roman Catholic Church, could join in their own ways and in the growing light of their own consciences. If 1982 sees an inconclusive verdict in the General Synod, it will be tempting to abandon all efforts of this sort (referred to pejoratively as 'schemes') in despair. After the failure of the Anglican-Methodist plan many felt that they were in darkness and some have never come out of it. But it seems likely that this time the obstacles to unity will be comparatively trivial. If this were to be generally felt, it would be tragically wrong for the Church of England to ignore two major facts. According to the New Testament, Christ commands visible unity; and according to repeated, overwhelming votes in the Methodist Conference, reunion is possible in England now while safeguarding the Catholic heritage on which Anglicans have traditionally insisted. In the light of these two facts, it does not seem to be open to Anglicans to abandon the quest for the visible unity of Christ's people in England. Covenanting ought to be renegotiated with determination.

The Archbishop of Canterbury

The personality of the Archbishop of Canterbury is always important to many Anglicans and that is our excuse for including a comment which slightly overlaps with the Preface to The Church of England Yearbook for 1982. The choice of Robert Runcie aroused unusual interest both because it was the first time that elected representatives of the Church of England had been officially consulted by the agents of the Crown and also because it was the first appointment of a man born after the First World War. The media quickly took the new archbishop to their hearts as a wartime hero, as a part-time pig-keeper, and as a former chairman of the committee which advises the BBC and IBA about their religious programmes; and additionally several television interviews have shown him to be a well-informed, thoughtful, and gently humorous man, more diffident than would generally be expected of holders of the Military Cross. There has also been a general welcome among the clergy, many of whom know of his excellent work as the chief pastor of the diocese of St Albans. In churchmanship he combines a firm hold of the tradition of Catholic spirituality with an open attitude to many modern realities. One of his chief interests has been in theological conversations with the Orthodox Churches, yet he has also been bold in applying pressure on the General Synod to provide a warmer pastoral care for people remarried after divorce and for homosexuals; he has surprised conservatives by publicly arguing that homosexuality is a handicap rather than a sin or a sickness (although he also annoyed 'gay' propagandists by his caution). On the issue of women priests he has annoyed enthusiasts, and American women in particular have been irritated by the impression that he takes Orthodox bishops more seriously than he takes them; but he has given a few signs of being open to conversion. The only clerical element tempted to be disgruntled about the promotion of this liberal Catholic has been the conservative Evangelical movement, which perhaps had been inclined to the illusion that everything was going its way; but any such critics would have been unable to produce a plausible alternative candidate. The Archbishop of York, whose background is Evangelical although he is no fundamentalist, is widely liked and greatly valued as a pastor and expositor of the Bible, but is known to find high office a strain. His sensitivity is deeper than is indicated by the easy charm of his social manner, his often topical or humorous sermons, and his felicitous public addresses.

During his enthronement in Canterbury Dr Runcie (as Oxford University has enabled us to call him) revealed his character. His realism is well suited to a period when the Church of England, far from triumphant in spiritual reality, is tempted to exaggerate the stories which it can tell of success, and when the Anglican Communion, unsure about its theological foundations and its future, is tempted merely to stress its present fellowship. 'The temptation to gain the Church's end by using the world's means is still with us', he declared. 'We are tempted to organize ourselves like any other party or pressure group, to establish sharper dividing lines between those who are members and those who are not, to compete more aggressively for attention from the public, to recruit new members with a strident self-confidence which suggests that we have nothing to learn, to persuade with a loud voice rather than with the quiet reasons of the heart.' Rejecting what he frankly called 'salesmanship', he turned instead to the examples of Mother Teresa of Calcutta and of Archbishop Romero of San Salvador (whose murder dominated the news on that very day, 25 March 1980) and to the simplicity of African Christianity. 'Our lives must be full of longing as we struggle to become more Christ-like', he said; and that involved 'a firm lead against rigid thinking, a judging temper of mind, the disposition to over-simplify the difficult and complex problems'. This enthronement sermon included a memorable act of self-denial by a man who is the centre of much affection and has about him the aura of success: 'if the Church gives Jesus Christ's sort of lead it will not be popular.'

Since his enthronement Dr Runcie has made no dramatic calls to the nation and has seldom said anything very original in his teaching within the Church. Historians may not find much to write about as they ponder these two years. It has nevertheless been instructive to observe how decisive his interventions have become in General Synod debates (all the more genuinely influential now that the Archbishop of Canterbury is seldom in the chair) and how on a very public and very glamorous occasion such as the wedding of the Prince of Wales he struck millions as a man who could talk sense. Wisely he delegates; he has surrounded himself with an able staff at Lambeth (headed by Bishop Ross Hook, who sacrificed the status of a diocesan bishop in order to be this kind of a servant) and by an energetic team in the leadership of the diocese of Canterbury. He has made a point of consulting his brother bishops and also has a wider circle of counsellors. It is surprising to think of such moves as innovations, but such they were to a large extent. Thus sheltered from some of the administrative pressures and spared the risks of a solo performance, he has had some time to be available as a pastor to troubled souls and to talk with people outside the English ecclesiastical machine. He has begun to gather knowledge, to win friends, and to develop a personal authority by international journeys, rightly believing that committees such as the Anglican Consultative Council can be no substitute for the person-to-person contacts made by a travelling pilgrim from Canterbury. He always strikes foreigners as being very much an English gentleman, but fortunately he is seldom called upon to move outside those circles where such an assessment is, on the whole, a compliment. The miracle wrought by his assistant and representative, Mr Terry Waite, in rescuing missionaries from an Iranian prison after trumped-up charges of espionage is only one example of the influence which an Archbishop of Canterbury can still wield if he takes the trouble to study and prepare the ground. Another example is the respectful attention given to his addresses about world problems in the USA, where he attracted audiences wider than would normally be expected by the Episcopal Church, a comparatively small denomination.

This may be the beginning of a Primacy as effective as, say, Randall Davidson's (1903-28), although in tune with an almost totally different age. Lord Davidson was no theologian and Dr Runcie has not been granted all the personal gifts which his five most recent predecessors exercised, but the more 'ordinary' man may well turn out to be better than any of the eccentric giants at the work of the primate of All England and the president of the Anglican Communion. Robert Runcie is splendidly gifted as a co-ordinating manager, and as a charming communicator. In this hope many pray for him.

Catholic leadership

We should be less than honest if we did not confess that behind that tribute to Dr Runcie's style lies a concern about the narrow-mindedness of some other leaders of contemporary Catholicism.

In the Church of England there is a movement for 'Catholic Renewal' which deserves the support it has received — and more support. But the leadership of the Anglican societies bearing the name Catholic often seems to be preoccupied by narrow and negative causes such as the resistance to women priests and to any conceivable terms of reunion which might be acceptable in the Free Churches. The contrast with the willingness of many Evangelicals to be somewhat flexible for the sake of evangelism is glaring. The Fountain Trust, for some years the successful focus of the Charismatic movement in the British Churches, has felt guided to sacrifice its own existence; but no such guidance appears to have been heard by the quite numerous Anglican Catholic societies. These 'Catholic leaders' seem to be skilled in the tactics of ecclesiastical politics, but to lack any greatness of strategic vision. If, as we believe, the Anglican Consultative Council has been right to call for a coherent ecumenical strategy, we also believe that some Anglican Catholic leaders bear the heaviest responsibility because they have failed to see that the first step is the sharing of Catholic order with non-episcopal Churches in a way which does not insult those Churches' existing ministries. If we are being unfair to Anglican Catholic leaders, we are not alone in hoping to see them prove their greatness. Many Anglicans want a Catholicism which is certainly the foundation of order in the Church — but is gloriously large and positive, as is the Gospel of the world's salvation, entrusted to the Catholic Church.

The personality of Pope John Paul II is often admired as being large and positive.

The last Preface to Crockford welcomed his election — and was rebuked by the religious correspondent of The Times for being naïve in its welcome. Clearly he is a big man as well as the holder of a big office, and on the eve of his visit to Britain we still share much of the hero-worship which usually surrounds him. There is no need to repeat here the personal tributes paid to him by, for example, the Archbishop of Canterbury. If his visit strengthens his own dawning interest in Anglicanism, that will be one of the ecumenical gains. As many commentators have noted, however, so far in his pontificate he has disappointingly displayed the limitations as well as the strengths of the character of the 'Pope from Poland'. The extent of his travels shows how unjust it would be to call him an isolationist, but every now and then a rigid conservatism in his religion obtrudes itself and distresses the flocks to whom he is trying to minister at great personal cost. He has been to Latin America, but the question remains whether he has really understood the economic and social situation which by its stinking injustice has persuaded many of the bishops and priests to be, as he thinks, too political. He has been to the USA, but has he been able to absorb the challenge of that still rumbustious democracy including its 'women's movement'? He has been to Africa, but it is doubtful whether he has really felt the power of the African traditions which are expressed in the pleas that priests should be allowed to have wives and children and that congregations should be allowed to use many ancestral customs which still make the supernatural vividly present. He has been to France and Germany, but has he listened to their laity in a Europe which seems very remote from any supernatural world? He has read many books and has met scientists, but does he understand personally and profoundly why in a science-based, freely democratic, and largely secular culture, Christianity needs to be restated in its faith and morals? He has revealed some distaste for the dolce vita pursued in the more secular quarters of Rome, but has he fully grasped why most of Rome's churches are poorly attended? In brief, has he ever really left Poland? It is reported that even bishops or cardinals or Vatican officials find it difficult to gain access to him for genuine discussions about tough problems. To be the Church of the people, the Church has only to stand firm, proclaiming the people's dignity along with its own: that is the Polish faith, arising out of the Polish experience, and it is noble. All who love freedom and courage admire the Poles and their strongly Christian leaders for being inflexibly themselves under a dehumanizing brand of Marxism imposed on them by foreign conquerors. But the situation in many other parts of the world including England is very different and far more complicated. In such places Catholicism needs a largeness which includes a discriminatingly affirmative attitude to a strange new world. There Catholic leadership needs to be positive but also open, for God is at work creatively in this world; new life is springing up, the wheat along with the weeds.

The comparison of personalities always tends to be odious, but when the Pope meets Dr Runcie the Anglican leader need not feel completely dwarfed; far more than John Paul II he embodies the Catholicism of the future.

The work of a bishop

Few complaints are heard these days about the appointment of bishops. Instead there seems to be a general acceptance of the system by which since 1977 the Prime Minister has had names fed to him or her by the Crown Appointments Commission (or, in the case of suffragans, by the diocesan bishop) — names which, it can be guessed, have been gathered by the Appointments Secretaries of the Prime Minister and the Archbishops. Apart from a few grumbles about the appointment of an outspoken theologian to Birmingham, the only controversy surrounded the translation of Dr Graham Leonard — a man equally outspoken because brave — from Truro to London announced in March 1981. It was a controversy marred by indiscretions about the confidential proceedings of the Crown Appointments Commission and by some surprisingly crude statements to the press. But those who regretted Dr Leonard's promotion because they disagreed with his ecclesiastical politics could not say that he lacked either the pastoral or the intellectual equipment for his new position. Many hopes surround him as he undertakes his heavy new responsibilities in the nation's largely unchurched capital while continuing to be a hard-working and shrewd chairman of the Board for Social Responsibility. Nor could critics say that the Prime Minister had failed to nominate the man whom the diocesan Vacancy in See Committee would have elected if left to itself. Empty ceremonies to elect and 'confirm' the new bishop, which have strangely persisted since 1533, need reform in accordance with a sensible report welcomed by the General Synod in 1982; but the only valid and crucial objection to the present procedures is theological. The system still gives the Prime Minister, who unlike the Queen need not be a member of the Church of England, the possibility of deciding which of two men should be the chief pastor of a diocese. This intrusion of the State into the proper sphere of the Church has many precedents, including medieval and Roman Catholic ones; but it will have to be abandoned before the Church of England can proceed from covenanting and co-operation to a full union with any of the Free Churches. It seems to most non-Anglicans as serious a matter as any of the problems noted in the three Anglicans' Memorandum of Dissent, and it is generous of the non-Anglicans not to have dissented from covenanting on this ground.

There is no room for complacency about the work which bishops do when appointed. Recent debates in the United Reformed Church have included many passionate refusals to accept bishops — and the evidence cited is evidence about the present practice of episcopacy in England. The Methodists have been considering whether the superintendents of circuits ought not to be made bishops instead of the chairmen of the larger districts. The National Pastoral Congress made a clear request for smaller dioceses in the Roman Catholic Church. Anglicans, too, have complained. Most of the complaints are about bishops being remote. In the description of a bishop's work in the proposed service of reconciliation inaugurating the covenant it is said: 'He is to know his people and be known by them.' Yet it is absurdly impossible for any diocesan bishop to know his whole diocese at any depth, and if he tries to do so he either overworks or, failing in the work, overtalks. The Bishop of Hereford explained the situation when he obtained the General Synod's support for the creation of a suffragan see: 'A parish priest feels a greater need for accountability to, and support from, the bishop. . . . Parishes are no longer content with a short episcopal visit for confirmation.' He also pointed out that the supply of assistant bishops from overseas has dried up.

So suffragans there must be — but of what kind? There can be frustration for them and for others when they are regarded as episcopal curates and not entrusted with a definite area in which they are for most purposes 'the' bishop. The practice now adopted by dioceses such as urban London and rural Salisbury seems an obvious improvement which ought to be copied everywhere with the appropriate changes: a diocesan bishop who is preferably something of a scholar and a statesman (a category which definitely includes the new Bishop of Salisbury) delegates most of the pastoral care to area bishops, although he is ready to handle exceptionally difficult problems and although for his own soul's health he knows that he ought never to be so grand as to be aloof. The most effective decision-making body in the diocese then becomes the diocesan bishop's Staff Meeting, although many decisions which remain the responsibility of the diocese as a whole are rightly reserved to more democratic bodies such as the Bishop's Council, the Board of Finance, and the Pastoral Committee. This pattern seems more desirable than the creation of a very large number of dioceses without much distinction to, or co-ordination between, them. The number of area bishops ought, we believe, to be increased substantially; but in the present administration of the Church of England the work of an archdeacon overlaps with that of an area or suffragan bishop, and provided that a workable area was given to the one bishop-archdeacon probably the number of clergy not in the parochial front line need not be much increased.

How to make effective the bishop's own claim to have the 'cure of souls' is the question most thoughtful churchmen ask as they experience the present system or non-system. The proposed service of reconciliation rightly stresses the bishop's teaching office. 'He shares with his fellow bishops a special responsibility to maintain and further unity of the Church, to uphold its discipline, and to guard its faith. . . . He is to teach and govern them after the example of the Apostles, speaking to them in the name of God and interpreting the Gospel of Christ'. The reality, however, is that not all of the present diocesan or area or suffragan bishops teach their own dioceses or the wider Church systematically. With many other pressures eating into their time, it is too easy for them to fall into thinking that their responsibility is discharged by pastorally informal confirmation and institution addresses, by brief remarks to synods, and by jolly after-dinner speeches. It is also too easy for them to seek exemption from the study of less familiar subjects by developing the habit of talking about themselves. Conspicuous exceptions include the Bishop of Chichester and, from a different school in churchmanship, the Bishop of Birmingham, whose Advent 1981 Pastoral Letter on The Kingdom of God in Our Land was a model of its kind.

Nowadays the House of Bishops does not corporately utter on doctrinal questions, however fundamental. There is a great contrast between the 1911–14 discussion which led up to a two-day debate in the Upper House of the Convocation of Canterbury and very carefully prepared resolutions carried nem. con. (as summarized in G.K.A. Bell's Randall Davidson, chapter xli) and the deafening silence in all official Church circles which greeted the publication by the SCM Press in 1980 of the Rev. Don Cupitt's Taking Leave of God, an essay far more hostile to the Christian faith in God the Creator through Christ the Saviour than any of the publications which stirred up such anger and evoked such cautious wisdom in the 1910s. Its publisher summed up the message of Mr Cupitt's 'painfully explicit' book thus: 'We need to abandon theological realism, to part company with the thought of an objective God, some kind of immense cosmic or supracosmic Creator-Mind, and struggle to realize religious values in this life, in relation to social and economic conditions objectively and presently prevailing, for that is all that we have.' Of course we recognize and welcome the pluralism in Anglican theology, now eloquently stated and blessed by the Church of England Doctrine Commission's 1981 report, Believing in the Church. There are nevertheless limits to pluralism if the Church is to be the Church. There is much to be said for the Anglican practice of waiting to see whether an ultra-radical theologian will find himself compelled by his own conscience to withdraw from any responsibility as one of the Church's accredited teachers (as Dr Michael Goulder of Birmingham University did when he resigned his orders in 1982, announcing that he could no longer believe in God). But there is nothing to be said for the abdication of responsibility implied in the failure to make any corporate comment on a total and public rejection of the heart of the Church's faith by a well-known priest rightly honoured for his intellectual eminence.

No man can be sufficient for all the tasks expected of a bishop nowadays. Since we have repeated and supported the common charge that bishops are not effective enough as pastors and teachers, we feel obliged to suggest one negative step which could be taken in order to save a bishop's time and one positive step which could increase his spiritual and intellectual impact. Negatively, we advocate the drastic reduction in the number of Anglican bishops with seats in the House of Lords. The House holds debates which are intrinsically valuable but not widely reported, and the ratio between the time spent by bishops in the House (or travelling to it) and the effect of their contributions is distressing to those who know or imagine how many opportunities await their attention in their dioceses. Bishops with a special gift for this work — Dr Gerald Ellison, Bishop of London 1973–81, was one such, and the present Bishop of Durham is, like his predecessor, another — are rare. The withdrawal of most of the bishops from the Lords would release them for their proper duties and would help to release the Church from an image which, as the Partners in Mission pointed out, damages evangelism. Positively, we advocate a firm plan of biblical and other spiritual studies for the clerical chapters and for the synods of deaneries, a plan in which bishops should take the lead as lecturers. At present too many deanery chapters feel most purposeful at breakfast, and too many deanery synods think that their only really serious business is the allocation to the parishes of the financial 'quota' decreed by the diocese.

The work of presbyter

The ordinal which is proposed for common use from the date of the covenant between the Church of England and others is practically identical with the provision made in the Alternative Service Book of 1980. It is in no way incompatible with the agreement reached by ARCIC. A statement about baptism, the Eucharist and the Ministry has come from Faith and Order meetings of the World Council of Churches — meetings which included representatives of an even wider range of Churches, from Charismatic or modernist Protestants to Eastern Orthodox and Roman Catholics. The latest meeting of this kind was at Lima in 1982. It can be said truthfully — and, in the context of past controversies, remarkably — that there is now a very large measure of agreement about the ideals. The theoretical agreement, however, does not mean that in practice Christians are clear about what a 'presbyter' (the title that commands the widest acceptance) ought to be doing in his or her parish or special ministry; and the lack of a practical agreement is accompanied by a crisis of confidence in the hearts of many ordained ministers, who work hard but are not sure that it is work which they ought to be doing. The time has come for radical thoughts and experiments.

One problem which is important for the Church of England concerns the relationship between the professional and the honorary. The last Preface to Crockford was taken to task for questioning whether it really was absolutely essential to recruit 400–450 full-time clergymen each year in order to maintain the Church of England. We admit that our questioning of the target was in poor taste, since the House of Bishops' ambitious figures were acclaimed by the General Synod and since no one would wish to argue that the Church be worse off if 400–450 acceptable candidates did present themselves each year, could be trained, and could be financed until their deaths. We can see why the tone of the references to the 'non-stipendiary' ministry in the official 1980 survey of The Church's Ministry was dismissive. Nevertheless we continue to ask whether the shortfall in the recruitment of paid full-timers (about a hundred a year too few despite recent improvements) must do quite the damage that the bishops anticipated in 1978.

Cannot more emphasis be put on honorary presbyters? Since the last Preface both the discussion and the action in this field have made progress, and the change is indeed remarkable since the cautious Bishops' Regulations of 1970; but we continue to ask the question. And the question will not go away even if the full-time ministry of the Church of England is enriched by the greater availability of Methodist or URC ministers. As we persist in this tactless question, our motive is not to impugn the value in English history or in the present day of the full-time priest utterly dedicated to the welfare of his parishioners. Our one wish is to see the whole Church escaping from the habit of seeing the laity as a silent society which keeps church buildings open and clergy families fed. Many lay people give of their time and money in the belief that all their present giving is their Christian duty — and in the belief that, as they are often told, they ought to be giving much more. So far the membership of the Church has accepted this burden with a generosity which, considering how materialistic our age is, we reckon heroic. As the burden grows with inflation, however, it becomes necessary to say out loud that in the New Testament the laity do not support the clergy (apart from the support of a few full-timers such as apostles). The clergy support the laity who are the Church witnessing in the world.

In November 1980 the Bishop of Winchester told the General Synod: 'It seems to me that we are faced with two traditions in our Church which are contradictory. . . . There is the tradition of a local parochial community, with a fully sacramental congregation served by its own ordained minister as one focal point of its identity, and there is the tradition of a fully professional clergy, professional as to the standard of their specialist training, professional as to the parity of their common discourse so that they can talk their own "in" language like any other profession, and professional rather than amateur as to their financial status.' The contrast was well drawn, and it was a valid point to say that the idea that a fully professional ministry can be or ought to be chiefly responsible for the pastoral care of all the parishes in England is not two centuries old; the history was set out in Anthony Russell's The Clerical Profession (SPCK, 1980). Is it not an exaggeration, though, to call the two traditions 'contradictory'? The local community needs to have its own leader and pastor. It needs to know its own, partly because it needs to know itself as a community by having its own. (That was the virtue in the medieval system of the resident parish priest who was often not easily distinguishable from the villagers whose confessions he heard and understood and could probably have extended out of his own information. The priest who ministered to the parish might enjoy at least a part of the tithes, but his hands were likely to be dirty with the work of the countryside and that was no bad thing for a pastor's heart.) However, there is also a place for the professional, since the local pastor needs to be supported, guided, and supplemented and the work involved in that wider — it should never be said, higher — ministry demands a minister's full-time dedication. (That was true of the medieval graduate priest or monk or friar.) Indeed, the Bishop of Winchester himself went on to speak sensitively about this full-time ministry of service and oversight, which he rightly linked with the responsibility of a bishop. Dr Taylor might equally well have described the full-time ministry in terms of the missionary's traditional role in Africa or Asia, being himself a former General Secretary of the CMS.

At present the decline in the number of clergy in the Church of England (from just over 13,000 in 1973 to just under 11,000 in 1981) is officially regarded as a disaster which must be reversed. The Ministry Co-ordinating Group under that exceptionally skilled administrator and pastor the Bishop of Rochester periodically reminds the Church of how the needs of the dioceses are greater than the supply, so that priests and deacons must be dealt out like rationed goods in wartime, the formula being a triumph of mathematics. In a sense the group is not mistaken. Both rural and urban dioceses feel themselves morally obliged to maintain networks of churches with small congregations but expensively professional pastors, and the assets of the Church Commissioners still encourage them to think in these conservative terms. When a church can be declared redundant, an elaborate process must be gone through, for the building is sacred; and when parishes must be combined in united benefices or groups or teams, the emphasis is very much on the full-time clergy, a sacred caste doing all that they can to replace 'our own vicar'. It is rightly stressed by bishops that four non-stipendiary ministers are needed to do the work which can be done by one full-time priest; so that there is no 'bargain' way of getting the present service. But slowly attitudes are changing. All the time the emphasis is moving away from dependence on buildings and on professionals — and economics is not the only influence at work, for the Church which is slowly emerging more closely resembles the Spirit-filled Body of Christ in the New Testament. We hope that in years to come this Directory will include more and more names of honorary presbyters, and that the difference between their ministry and that of the professionals will never be thought of in terms of contradiction or subordination. It is in this sense we believe that it is possible and right to respond to the challenge put by Bishop Din Dayal from North India to the General Synod: 'If the mission of the Church is to be carried out, the ministry of the Church will have to be expanded many times over.'

The revival of the diaconate as an honourable and permanent order of ordained servants continues to attract discussion. The reasons why the idea is attractive are obvious: deacons are important in the New Testament, yet their importance is as servants and 'service' is very much the key-word for those who have the renewal of the twentieth-century Church at heart. We see clearly that there ought to be room in the Church of England for men and women with the vocation to give their lives as deacons. Reducing the diaconate to an apprenticeship for the priesthood, while talking loudly to other Churches about the 'historic threefold ministry', has become intolerable. But we remain unconvinced that the numbers of such vocations are likely to be large. We also remain unconvinced that here is an alternative to large numbers of honorary presbyters. The centrality of Holy Communion in the parochial life of the Church of England is one of its strongest points and it is to be hoped that the presidency at the Eucharist will always be confined to priests or presbyters. The idea, sometimes canvassed, of 'lay celebration' is theological, and particularly ecumenical, dynamite. One need not be a deacon in order to take other services or preach; more than six thousand 'Readers' in the Church of England disprove that. Nor is it necessary to make people deacons in order to persuade them to accept training for their mission. All that is really needed for 'adult education' or 'lay training' to take off in the Church of England is for the Church at every level to take it seriously — as the Church has not yet done.

A strategy for the Church

It cannot escape notice how often criticism or questioning of the Church of England — from the Partners in Mission, for example, or from the Anglican Consultative Council — is based on the belief that there is too little vision or sense of strategy. That is a fair criticism. The most powerful answer to it is provided by the Evangelical insistence on the conversion of the individual, and that explains why the Evangelical movement continues to have such an impact. Almost half the men now being trained for full-time ministry in the Church of England are at definitely Evangelical colleges. Yet the traditional Evangelical answer is not wide enough. It is not for us to produce a detailed plan for the Church of England, which in any case does not take kindly to national or international plans or calls; but we accept the implied challenge. The highest service to be rendered to the Church at this moment is to sum up clearly a hope for it and for the society around it. We too look for a revived Church of England in a revived England.

As the inspiration of any real hope for the future of the Christian Church, a restatement of Christian belief is of the highest importance. Fortunately in the Church of England there are many signs that the mood of destructive radicalism whose symbols were Honest to God and The Myth of God Incarnate has matured into a desire to restate in the light of modern knowledge and experience something recognizable by Evangelicals as the everlasting Gospel. Since this is no place to attempt a theological essay, we content ourselves with welcoming the intention of the Doctrine Commission to progress beyond its studies of Christian Belief and Believing in the Church to a more positive, perhaps even systematic, attempt to say what should nowadays be believed; and we mention only a few representative publications. Recent books by Bishop John Robinson and Professor Maurice Wiles, often regarded as the heresiarchs of Cambridge and Oxford, have shown that those theologians include conservative streaks in their complex personalities. It so happened that the Oxford University Press was the publisher of two books which superbly summed up the present tendencies of a devout but intelligent middle-of-the-road Anglicanism: Reasonable Belief by the twin brothers Professor Anthony Hanson and Bishop Richard Hanson and the slightly more idiosyncratic God as Spirit by the late Geoffrey Lampe, whose death was a loss to true religion as well as to sound learning. The Collins Religious Book Award has deservedly gone to two Anglican parish priests for their spiritual writings: Yes to God by Alan Ecclestone and Love's Endeavour, Love's Expense by W.H. Vanstone. Another Anglican layman, Professor Ninian Smart, has contributed perceptively to the new dialogue between mankind's great faiths; and a priest-scientist, A.R. Peacocke, has looked down the telescope or microscope into marvels which evoke faith. What is now needed is a determined effort to popularize excitingly the conclusions reached in such books, as an alternative to the conservative Catholicism and Evangelicalism which have, and will continue to have, many sincere adherents because the presence of the holy God is to be found within the discipline of those venerable systems.

When outlining hopes for the deeper and wider revival of English Church life, anyone writing in 1982 must be conscious of the widespread feeling that there is no reason to hope — that what can be expected is a declining Church in a declining and increasingly secular nation, until a bloody rebirth comes amid persecution or until the victory of Antichrist is seen to be a prelude to the final Apocalypse. We believe that other, slightly less alarming, developments are also possible, and can be made to happen if the present generation co-operates with good purposes greater than its own.

Our hope is that an agreement to move forward into visible unity with Methodism, and with the United Reformed Church when possible, will gradually result in a movement of renewal where one vital stage will be a reconciliation with Rome. The Papacy is the providential centre of the 'blessed company' of all Christian people on this planet, but much of its history has been deeply tragic; the full recognition of the Church of England as a Uniate Church in communion with the Bishop of Rome would help to show that the Papacy is no longer the ghost of the empire of the Caesars. It would be good for England if this rebirth of the English Churches could take place in the setting of a renewal of politics including a position of much greater influence for the reconciling moderates given new teeth by the SDP/Liberal Alliance; and it would be good for England if the fulfilment of this process could be in the United States of Europe. Although these moderate and unitive political movements do not nowadays enjoy the blessing of the World Council of Churches, they are for England the wisest form of the social involvement which the WCC rightly advocates. Such movements could recover for Church and people the thrill of dynamic crusading; but this time the thrill would come in the cause of a greater unity — not a cause stressed by most crusades in the past. They could also free the Church of England of much of its stuffily middle-class lifestyle, for with the aid of Christians who have long known themselves to belong to minorities many pieces of luggage acquired during a history now becoming remote could with advantage be lost. These disposable items include many features of the present Establishment of the Church of England, but nothing would be gained by losing our Church's essential character as a thoughtful, comprehensive body patient with minorities and honouring truth, beauty, and love wherever they are to be found. The mission of the English Church or Churches will almost always be the quiet meeting of people, and it is in order to make friendly conversations about religion more constructive that more adult education is needed. The mission deserves the consecration of a very wide variety of talents, including the talents given to those prepared to dedicate and sacrifice their whole lives as bishops, presbyters, or deacons. Part-time, honorary leadership is also needed on a massive scale. That ought to come more easily as the society upon which the Church draws becomes more educated and more leisured. What counts, whether the Christian is ordained or lay, paid or honorary, is being able to say from the heart, with the full assent of the intelligence, to another human heart: 'I believe and I trust, because I have met God in the living Christ.'

How to keep well-informed . . .

on the Church

at work in the world

It is more than ever essential that Churchpeople should keep themselves fully informed about the important discussions and developments that are taking place in the Church of England today.

The Church newspaper with universal appeal that gives the widest coverage of Church news, both home and overseas, is the Church Times. Its responsible editorials, stimulating articles, special features, and book reviews are read by scores of thousands of active and thoughtful people of all shades of churchmanship and political following.

The Church Times plays an indispensable part in the life of the Church of England; it has maintained the highest standards of journalism throughout its 119 years of life.

In order to introduce the Church Times to potential new readers we shall be very pleased to supply free specimen copies to any parish willing to promote the sale of the paper.

HOW TO ADDRESS THE CLERGY

As a guide to laymen, who may have difficulty in knowing how to address the various grades of the clergy, we give below the forms in common usage today, (a) on the envelope of a letter, and (b) in a letter or in speech. The alternative form, given in brackets, is more formal and seldom used nowadays save at official functions and formal gatherings.

ARCHBISHOPS

(a) The Most Reverend The Lord Archbishop of. . . .
(b) 'Archbishop' ('Your Grace').

Note: (i) ENGLAND. The full style of the two English Primates, being Privy Councillors, is 'The Most Reverend and Right Honourable The Lord Archbishop of Canterbury' or 'of York'.

(ii) SCOTLAND. The Presiding Bishop of the Episcopal Church is called the Primus. He is addressed as:
(a) The Most Reverend The Primus.
(b) 'Primus'.

(iii) U.S.A. The Head of the Episcopal Church in the U.S.A. is called the Presiding Bishop. He is addressed as:
(a) The Most Reverend The Presiding Bishop or The Right Reverend A. B. Smith.
(b) 'Bishop' or 'Bishop Smith'.

(iv) JAPAN. The Presiding Bishop of the Nippon Sei Ko Kwai (Japan) is addressed as:
(a) The Most Reverend the Bishop of . . . (his diocese).
(b) 'Bishop'.

(v) METROPOLITANS
AUSTRALIA AND CANADA have Primates as well as Metropolitans of Provinces.
SOUTH AFRICA. The Metropolitan of the Church in South Africa is always the Archbishop of Cape Town.
WEST INDIES, NEW ZEALAND, and WEST AFRICA. The Metropolitans can be appointed from any Diocese within the Provinces.

vi) RETIRED ARCHBISHOPS. Upon retirement an Archbishop properly goes back to the status of a Bishop but he is given as a courtesy the style and address of an Archbishop. If an Archbishop is appointed to a Bishopric or some other office he is addressed as a Bishop.

BISHOPS

or The Right Reverend A. B. Smith.
(b) 'Bishop' ('My Lord')

Note: (i) Bishops of the Episcopal Church in the U.S.A. are addressed as:
(a) The Right Reverend A. B. Smith.
(b) 'Bishop' or 'Bishop Smith'.

(ii) The Bishop of London, being a Privy Councillor, is addressed on the envelope as 'The Right Reverend and Right Honourable The Lord Bishop of London'.

(iii) The Bishop of Meath in Ireland, by tradition, is always addressed on the envelope as 'The Most Reverend The Bishop of Meath'.

DEANS AND PROVOSTS

(a) The Very Reverend The Dean (The Provost) of . . . (name of the Cathedral City).
(b) 'Dean' ('Mr. Dean') or 'Provost' ('Mr. Provost').

ARCHDEACONS

(a) The Venerable The Archdeacon of . . . (name of the Archdeaconry).
(b) 'Archdeacon' ('Mr. Archdeacon').

Note: A Bishop who holds office as Dean or Archdeacon may be addressed by the title of his office, e.g. The Dean of . . . or the Archdeacon of . . ., but even so the title is prefixed by the words 'The Right Reverend' in the address and in public announcements.

CANONS

Both Residentiary Canons (who live in the Cathedral precincts and have Cathedral duties) and Honorary Canons (who are usually holders of benefices within the Diocese to whom this title is given as a mark of appreciation of their work) are addressed as:

(a) The Reverend Canon A. B. Smith.
(b) 'Canon Smith'.

Note: Minor Canons are appointed to assist in the conduct of the services in Cathedrals. They are addressed as:

(a) The Reverend A. B. Smith.
(b) 'Mr. Smith'.

PREBENDARIES

(a) The Reverend Prebendary A. B. Smith.
(b) 'Prebendary Smith'.

RURAL DEANS

This is a title of office and conveys no special designation.

OTHER CLERGY

All other clergy, whether beneficed or unbeneficed, are addressed as follows:

(a) The Reverend A. B. Smith.
(b) 'Mr. Smith'.

Note: (i) In speaking to or about these clergymen it should always be 'Mr. Smith' (or on some formal occasions 'The Reverend Mr. Smith'), but never 'The Reverend Smith'.
(ii) Married clergy and their wives should be addressed jointly as 'The Reverend A. B. and Mrs. Smith'.
(iii) It is customary for parishioners to address their incumbent as 'Rector' or 'Vicar', as the case may be.

CHAPLAINS TO THE ARMED FORCES

SENIOR CHAPLAINS

The senior chaplain in each of the three Services has the status of Archdeacon. The correct title of each is:

Royal Navy	The Ven. The Chaplain of the Fleet and Archdeacon for the Royal Navy.
Army	The Ven. The Chaplain General to the Forces.
Royal Air Force	The Ven. The Chaplain in Chief, RAF.

They are addressed as 'Archdeacon' or 'Padre' (or their formal title).

OTHER CHAPLAINS

(a) The Reverend A. B. Smith, RN (or CF or RAF, etc.)
(b) 'Padre' or 'Padre Smith'.

Note: In no circumstances should military titles be used.

Ordained members of religious orders are normally addressed as Father, and lay members as Brother, except that all members of the Society of St. Francis are addressed as Brother. Father may also be used for addressing any priest if that is his personal preference.
